Maravillas! (Madrid, 1990) solucionario lineas de transmision rodolfo neri 18 The effects of diazoxide on pancreatic exocrine secretion and insulin release in adult rats. The effect of diazoxide on insulin release and on pancreatic exocrine secretion was investigated in rats. This agent is a potent vasopressor agent and also a K-ATP channel activator. In conscious rats diazoxide (10 mg/kg, p.o.) produced a marked increase in insulin plasma levels and a significant increase in pancreatic exocrine secretion without affecting the gastric mucosa. In contrast to diazoxide, aortic perfusion with K-ATP channel-deficient solutions did not affect basal insulin levels and exocrine pancreatic secretion. The effect of diazoxide on exocrine pancreatic secretion and on insulin release was partially antagonized by L-arginine. However, when L-arginine was administered intravenously 2d92ce491b
