I have a scrollview and inside there is a button, and I want to detect if the scrollview is at the bottom, and if so, I want to do something. I tried to do this by calling the below method inside the button click event, but it is not working, nothing is happen. private void checkForScrollViewBottom(ScrollView scrollView) { if (scrollView.ContentSize.Height == scrollView.ContentSize.Height) { string result = "Yes"; MessageBox.Show(result, "Exit"); } } Update: I tried to convert the ContentSize to a double and it is still not working, this is the code that I am using private void checkForScrollViewBottom(ScrollView scrollView) { double totalHeight = scrollView.ContentSize.Height; if (totalHeight == double.MaxValue) { string result = "Yes"; MessageBox.Show(result, "Exit"); } } This is what I got in the message box Yes A: You're measuring the ContentSize too early, before the layout has been performed. You need to do this in the ViewDidLoadSubviews method (if you're using a UIViewController), or in the ViewDidLoad method (if you're not). For example: protected override void ViewDidLoad() { base.ViewDidLoad(); // Do any additional setup after loading the view, typically from a nib. double total

Originally a ten-track EP (all tracks have since been released on their self-titled major-label debut), the EP is said to be heavy on the drum and guitar motifs. The album also contains an intro and outro of the song "One Step Closer", the first track of the band's debut album Evolve. The first single from the EP, "Radioactive", features an experimental and vocoded melody and incorporates a rap at the beginning. The track charted on Billboard's Hot Rock Songs, peaking at No. 20, and became the band's first top 20 single. Continued Silence is the debut EP by the American alternative rock band Imagine Dragons, released on November 21, 2012 under the record label Interscope. The EP was originally released as a free download in conjunction with the band's 2011 self-titled EP, that featured a four-song demo. For this EP, the band performed all the instruments themselves. The EP was later released as a download on iTunes as a part of the iTunes Festival along with other acts such as Florence + the Machine, Fun, Franz Ferdinand, and The xx. The band's debut album Evolve is said to be heavily influenced by the band's experience on the EP. The EP is also a playable track for Rock Band 4.
