A review of the 5' region of porcine adenosine deaminase mRNA. Porcine adenosine deaminase cDNA was isolated from a lymphocyte cDNA library, containing poly(A)-RNA from pig lymphocytes. The open reading frame codes for a 54,000 Mr protein with a molecular weight of about 60,000 Mr by SDS-PAGE. The purified protein has a single band of activity in SDS-PAGE. N-terminal amino acid sequence analysis showed the protein to be a homologue of the human adenosine deaminase. In Northern blot analysis, a 20 kb mRNA, containing the entire coding region for adenosine deaminase, was detected. Within the 5' untranslated region of the mRNA, a first ATG is located 22 nt upstream of the initiation codon and a second ATG 88 nt downstream. The first ATG overlaps with the 3' end of the N-terminal amino acid sequence. In the 5' flanking region of the mRNA, the nucleotide sequence at the putative transcriptional start site is conserved.

Dystopia The World is in Ruins For me, the relationship between literature and genre is a difficult one to articulate. Because I enjoy both, writing a novel is no easy task. However, sometimes the rules of genre don't work in my favour, forcing
