"The bird had been bleeding and so she asked if she could send it to the vet. The bird was quite scared of humans so we brought it along," said the woman, who did not wish to be named. "The vet couldn't do anything for the bird so he wrapped it up and we took it to a place where they knew how to help it. It's a specialised clinic and we paid 10 dirhams ($2.50) to them." She added: "It was around nine or ten and we got back home around 11.30pm and found the bird missing. "Then we found out that it flew into the window. The bird was bleeding and even if I was in bed I would have woken up if it was stuck in the house. "The vet called the police and after that he called me. He said that I should call the bird owner and then they could come and collect the bird." The woman said that she was still in shock. "I was very scared for the bird. It was my first time seeing anything like this. We had already had one bird for a few months. We are very fond of it and we also have the same nickname for both of them," she said. "The other bird is very gentle. We feed it with fish and it likes to be out in the sun. It would cry when we left and I think that it was upset about the incident.
