The effect of stem-loop alteration on the expression of tyrosine hydroxylase, tryptophan hydroxylase and phenylethanolamine N-methyltransferase genes in neuroblastoma cells. Using a competitive RT-PCR assay we have studied the influence of the primary structure of the 5' untranslated region of the tyrosine hydroxylase, tryptophan hydroxylase and phenylethanolamine N-methyltransferase genes on their expression in neuroblastoma cells. We have shown that the arrangement of stem-loop structure, located near the 5' end of the mRNA of these genes, plays an important role in the level of expression of the corresponding genes. The 5' end and the loop sequences of the 5' untranslated region of the hydroxylase and the N-methyltransferase genes are identical, thus the same rules apply to these genes.
