We are working on the automation of user research. A user will export a set of results from a web survey, and these results are subsequently fed into an analytics system (such as ChartMogul or Google Analytics) for further data extraction. We are debating about which tool to use to export to CSV (and on top of that, what would be the best approach to deal with the response data). So far, my first idea was to use Google Sheets (and the new spreadsheets extension for Gmail) to get users to answer some questions on a web form, feed this data into an Iframe within a website, and push that website to the users' email address (and code the form submission into a d4474df7b8
