The themes change the look and feel of the user interface, for example by giving it a dock-like look and adding various visual effects. It is also possible to change the look and feel of the main window. If you find a theme you like, you can make it the default theme and your changes will remain. There is also a special theme that works with the OS X and Linux versions. Contents Overview Themes are a fairly new concept and there are not many out there. You will be able to find a wide variety of them in the Mac App Store, but the quality can be poor or missing entirely. On the Internet, there are many more options available, and many of them seem to be user-contributed. One of the easiest ways to find themes is to use the search function on Theme Browser, a free web-based theme-browsing service that will search for "chrome theme" or "firefox theme" or "window theme", among others. Theme Browser will also find all the themes available in the Mac App Store. The theme engine of Chrome is based on the underlying Qt library. If you don't have Qt installed on your machine, you can use the online version of the program to download the theme engine, and then install it through the Mac App Store. Be sure to back up the existing files before doing this. You can also download the themes from the developer's website. The downloads come in the form of a zip archive. Simply download that, extract it, and drop the files in your "AppSupport" folder. You might also need to update the "app_name.txt" file in the same folder. If you are using Windows, you will need to choose the "All files (.) in the current folder" option. When you open a theme, it will be shown in a new tab in the Theme Browser. You can install the themes and switch between them easily, and without leaving the browser. You can see the change that the theme has made in the browser. You will have to ask the Internet for it, since the developer's website has vanished. For more details on installing the themes, see Mac App Store. Supported features Various visual effects that can be enabled for windows, such as: Opacity Blur Drop shadows X-ray windows (standard chrome) Perspective Shadowless
