

A dictionary of law is a type of reference book about the law that gives citations to the sources of the law and explanations of the law. An early dictionary of law was the New Shorter Oxford English Dictionary, which was published in .Q: Is there any way to scan a list into a list, so that the first element of the new list is the same as the first element of the old list? Given the following list: l = [1, 2, 3, 4] I want to scan this list into a new list, like so: new_list = [1, 2, 3, 4] I have tried many ideas like.append(),.extend(),.insert() etc., but nothing so far has worked and the solution is not written in Python. A: You can use list comprehension for this: l = [1,2,3,4] new_list = [item for item in l] This will create a new list containing all the elements of l A: You can use a list comprehension: >>> l = [1, 2, 3, 4] >>> new_list = [item for item in l] >>> new_list [1, 2, 3, 4] More information on list comprehensions can be found here. A modified bistability model for the follicle-stimulating hormone/uteinizing hormone interaction. We present a four-variable model of the FSH-LH interrelationship for computing steady-state serum levels of both hormones. The model is based on known physiology and is subject to the following fundamental constraints: i. FSH and LH act additively, and ii. serum levels of LH can be substituted for those of a given hormone dose in determining its steady-state dose-response curve. The model can compute a bifurcation diagram for FSH versus LH in which the steady-state level of one of the hormones is plotted against the other. On visual analysis, some of these diagrams mimic the classical FSH-LH interaction. The approach is applicable to situations where the various aspects of the regulation of LH are known (e.g. the receptor-ligand interaction) but that of the regulation of FSH is not (e.g. the cellular action of dopamine, insulin, androgen, and somatostatin). Thus,
