I used the code below to try and do this, but when the program starts it just loads the original file and there is nothing else. I don't have a clue as to why. import java.io.; import java.util.; public class textfile { public static void main(String[] args) throws Exception{ FileInputStream fis = new FileInputStream("file.txt"); BufferedReader input = new BufferedReader(new InputStreamReader(fis)); FileOutputStream fos = new FileOutputStream("file2.txt"); BufferedWriter output = new BufferedWriter(new OutputStreamWriter(fos)); String s; StringBuilder stringBuilder = new StringBuilder(); while((s = input.readLine())!= null){ stringBuilder.append(s); } output.write(stringBuilder); output.flush(); } } A: String s; StringBuilder stringBuilder = new StringBuilder(); while((s = input.readLine())!= null){ stringBuilder.append(s); } output.write(stringBuilder); output.flush(); You are missing a call to input.close() In this example you are appending the entire file contents to the file, and then writing the whole thing out as one large line. You should be able to just

Multifunctional porphyrin-coated mesoporous silica nanoparticles (MSNs) were prepared by wrapping porphyrin-coated silica nanoparticles (SiNPs) with a polymer layer containing hydrophilic and cationic pendant groups using amidation reactions. Due to the amphiphilic nature of the polymer, the SiNPs were assembled into core-shell structures with a wide range of morphologies and sizes. These core-shell structures are surrounded by a polymer layer that encapsulates the nanoparticles and can be easily functionalized to attach a variety of targeting moieties. The polymers were characterized by dynamic light scattering, transmission electron microscopy, Fourier transform infrared spectroscopy, and (1)H NMR. The multifunctional nature of the porphyrin-co
