'alert': '⬜⬜⬜⬜⬜⬜' } }); } $(function() { $('.form-control').iCheck({ checkboxClass: 'icheckbox_square-green', radioClass: 'iradio_square-green', increaseArea: '20%' // optional }); }); Apple Inc. is set to debut a car-monitoring service called CarPlay in two new iPhones next month. The service will work with Apple's CarPlay dashboard and will automatically download apps and stream music in the car without the need for a separate music player, according to a person with direct knowledge of the matter. CarPlay could alter the smartphone landscape even further, opening up a new revenue source for Apple and potentially spurring the development of a new generation of connected vehicles. On-car technology is exploding as automakers scramble to keep up with apps and services such as Google's Waymo self-driving car service and Facebook Inc.'s WhatsApp. "No other company has really introduced a connected-car experience as ambitious as this," said Tony Cripps, an analyst with Ovum, a research firm. "It opens up Apple to a whole new market and could be even more significant in terms of the potential for the company." CarPlay, introduced at last year's Worldwide Developers Conference, will work with more than 100 cars including those from General Motors Co., Honda Motor Co. and Mercedes-

Benz. It will allow iPhone users to make phone calls, listen to music

Designs inspired by the new look of Windows 8 (Metro UI), and the Aero Style from Windows XP. Category:Software icon setsIt may not have happened as quickly as you'd hoped but it's nice to see US Senator Charles Schumer, who had a strong lead over New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg, come back down to Earth and settle for a tie in the New York Democratic Senate Primary. What's more, the former Deputy Mayor's right hand man and top adviser Chris Bowman has conceded defeat as well, and has handed the keys to the mayor's campaign to national political analyst Larry Sabato. The night of the election, Mayor Bloomberg's team huddled and decided to call a press conference at 11:30pm. It was late, but they wanted to declare the day a victory. They put Sabato, who is no political lightweight, in charge of the press conference. The mayor gave a short, upbeat speech, and Sabato, who never did much for Mayor Bloomberg, began laying into Schumer. "What you all saw tonight was a decision by Mayor Bloomberg to once again put his personal interests and ambitions ahead of the people of New York," Sabato said. "What you see on the outside is an arrogance and an attitude, where people think they're better than everybody else. It's a problem I've seen in every job I've ever had, and I'm sure it's a problem in every job you'll have, and you should all take a good look at this in terms of what it means to run for public office. "The mayor's press conference on his return from his campaign was probably the most blatant example of the arrogance I've seen in my life," Sabato continued. "He's going to run for president of the United States. He's going to run for the United States Senate. He's going to run for the United States House. But when it comes to dealing with people, who are really struggling and the residents of New York City, he's got a problem, and it's one he's going to have to address. "The mayor's press conference has the feel of a 'you're in, you're out' sort of announcement," he said. "The mayor knows what he's done and how he's done it, but what he does with that knowledge is the matter of debate," Sabato said. "What do you do when you have a record of arrogance? Arrogance is a
