I'm trying to use the "monolog/log" package. For phpunit tests, I'm using composer update composer install monolog/log My composer.json file is here. What else do I need to do? A: See the documentation on how to install it. In your case you can do: composer require monolog/log This will create the files in your vendor directory. A: Done and done: composer require monolog/log A: You should add it to your composer.json. "monolog/log": "dev-master" Then you can: composer update And you can access it in your app by doing: use Monolog\Logger; And you can access the Monolog package in your code with use Monolog\Logger as Log; Q: how can i get the domain name from the url I am working with Magento 2.2.6 I am trying to get the url of a domain. Stand Up for Comic Relief The number of people that turned up to watch the live broadcast of Comic Relief on BBC One tonight is pretty amazing. Normally I try to avoid it because I feel like it detracts from viewing, but I was happy to have the sofa all to myself to enjoy the whole spectacle. The show was a bit slow at the start, and then all of the sing-along hosts chimed in to let us know that nothing really good was going to happen on the live broadcast until it had been recorded earlier that day. By the time the first hour had passed it was pretty clear that they had. The whole show felt more like the old Comic Relief from a few years ago. There were many moments of comedy, lots of stand up and a few skits. At the start of the night there was a focus on the UK as a whole, and not just on the London audience, and the Blackpool Illuminations were mentioned by Stephen Fry and Alan Carr. The whole show ended with Stephen Fry telling his audience to go and change the d0c515b9f4

AFAIK the maximum storage size on Mysql is very small - 128 GB. I'm not looking for recommendations, but more answers to my question? Is it even possible to store 10TB in MySQL? A: Without a specific DBMS product for that, you will have to write it yourself.

You can assume you are going to need at least 16MB per row (information_schema.innodb_max_dirty_pages_pct is 100 by default) and I am not sure I can find any exact math on available storage space, but 16MB / 2⁵⁰ (since you can fit 256MB per row) should provide you with 9+ bits of storage space for a table of 2⁵⁰ rows. You could potentially see something like: CREATE TABLE table (id int(11) unsigned NOT NULL auto_increment, dt datetime DEFAULT NULL, data blob DEFAULT NULL, PRIMARY KEY (id)) ENGINE=InnoDB; CREATE TABLE meta (dt datetime NOT NULL, data blob NOT NULL, PRIMARY KEY (dt)) ENGINE=InnoDB; /* Some other table with 50 tables of row / meta row */ This is probably a good start, since you will not have much overhead of row size itself (16MB gives you around 64KB), but you have to be prepared for a lot of system overhead while reading/writing the data. You will have to handle all the IO yourself, so if you need to keep a certain kind of DBMS write-through, you'll be out of luck (and also at risk for lock contention issues which you will have to handle on your own). You should also be aware of the increased IO block sizes with storage engines that use it (storage engines usually deal with many smaller chunks, for example, innodb with 8KB blocks). Any database will fail if you have to
